Program Overview

MPC's Associate in Science in Business Administration for Transfer degree program prepares students for further studies in all business disciplines upon transfer to a four year university in the CSU system. Successful students will be able to make information based decisions, complete core business processes, and communicate effectively in a business environment.

Job Outlook

Business administration skills are essential in every field imaginable, from aerospace to zoos. Graduates can work in a variety of job roles, including in finance, management, marketing, sales, and human resources. Statewide, business administration jobs will grow 12% by 2026, while regionally, opportunities abound in retail, health care, education, tourism, and technology. Graduates can also strike out on their own as startup entrepreneurs or small business owners.

The general business foundation I received at MPC prepared me very well for when I started my upper division business courses at Cal Poly. Aside from the technical accounting skills I was taught at MPC, I was really introduced to other aspects of the business realm and how Accounting played a key role. This sparked a curiosity that still lives with me today.
