They look great, Michael. I particularly support goals 1 and 3. One comment – the reduction in funds for adjunct instructors has reduced the nursing programs ability to meet these objectives. Our summer course offerings are taught by nursing faculty, as adjunct instructors and we have had to cancel the home health course designed to assist nursing students and grads who haven't been able to find hospital jobs, which is a major problem, to be better prepared for alternative employment. And, reducing our learning Resource Center hours means fewer instructor times available for students to receive support and assistance in better learning nursing knowledge and skills outside of class hours. Sure hope we can continue to have such amazingly successful students, but additional adjunct teacher funding would greatly help nursing students.
